We are fully supportive of these proposals put forward by SeAH Wind. This project will create over 1,500 jobs at the construction stage, and 750 skilled and semi-skilled permanent jobs once operational. There will also be many jobs created and safeguarded in the supply chain creating additional economic benefit for Redcar and Cleveland and the wider Tees Valley. This is key at a time where the area is still recovering from the loss of highly paid, skilled jobs at SSI .

The building of the world's largest monopiles manufacturing facility will see the investment in excess of £200m by an overseas company sending out a strong message that Redcar and Cleveland is a beacon for investment and will encourage further investment in the near future. It will also provide valuable business rates income that will contribute towards the delivery of local services.
